AND RECYCLING SERVICE

WHAT IF YOU COULD PROPERLY DISPOSE OF SURPLUS COMPUTER EQUIPMENT AND HELP CHANGE SOMEONE'S LIFE?
GOOD NEWS! You can, by choosing to reuse with InterConnection.

Who is InterConnection?

InterConnection is a certified non-profit organization. Our mission is to make internet technology accessible to underserved communities around the world. We accomplish this by providing computer training and refurbished computers to people and communities in need. We are the largest non-profit of this kind in Washington State.

Why not just recycle surplus computers?

Recycling an unwanted computer is shortsighted considering the many benefits of reuse. When you choose to reuse, you give your computer equipment a second life and give opportunity to someone in need.

What happens to the computers you can't reuse?

Not all used computers can be refurbished. Non-useable computers are recycled in-house. Items we can't process are passed onto a local hazardous waste recycler. No materials are exported for recycling and no materials end up in landfills.

Is my data safe?

Our data destruction process is the best and most economical around. We provide free data erase services that meet Department of Defense standards for all computers. For companies that need extra security we can arrange secure transportation, hard drive shredding, certificate of destruction and legal indemnification.

What do you take and what does it cost?

We accept all computers, laptops, monitors, network equipment, printers and scanners. We do not charge for reuse, however recycling fees do apply to those items we can't refurbish.

What kinds of businesses choose to reuse rather than recycle?

Lots of different businesses, actually. Large companies such as Real Networks and Microsoft have chosen to charitably reuse with InterConnection, along with counties, cities, and school districts.
